

2019 ComEd Powering the Arts PROGRAM GUIDELINES

Purpose and Overview

Exposure to the arts is vitally important for the health of our communities. Coming together to share a cultural offering is a way to cultivate community and achieve social connection, which inspires and uplifts us all. Arts and culture should be accessible to everyone. Through this program ComEd and the League of Chicago Theatres look to reach audiences that have otherwise been unable to access the richness of cultural offerings throughout the ComEd service area.

Experiences in the arts increases creativity across the spectrum of human endeavor. Each experience provides audiences with further opportunities for interactions, whether they are inspired to educate themselves further about the topic or to create a work of art themselves, or perhaps to attend another event. Each exposure at a minimum enhances the quality of life for the audiences but can also, in profound ways, change lives.

Recognizing that access to art is crucial to the quality of our lives, ComEd has partnered with the League of Chicago Theatres to commit to supporting cultural institutions in northern Illinois with their efforts to reach underserved audiences in our communities. The new ComEd Powering the Arts Program has been designed to assist local institutions in these efforts by providing funding for some expenses toward these goals.
